Class Activities

Frankie Sauls

I have just recently gotten on the mailing list! I will be unable to join the luncheon; I am in Florida since my parents moved here in 1958. Doing well, briefly, have 3 grown sons, 7 grandchildren, taught aerobic fitness classes for 20 years, overlapping owning a small gift shop for 28 years! My husband died 7 years ago. We had traveled a good bit. Two of my sons were career military. Each served in Iraq and Afghanistan in the same year, same time.

Editor's Comment: Frankie, please extend our thanks to your two sons from a grateful Class of '57. We appreciate their service to our country!

Ann Corderman

My Mother's Day celebration with my oldest daughter Laura and granddaughter Brandi. Ate some steamed crabs in Canton on the waterfront. Lovely day!

Bob Westphal

Bob Westphal writes that he is expecting a second grandson. Actually he is a week late as of June 12th. Bob doesn't think he'll ever even get a basketball team, and there are no other grandchildren. But new fishing buddies are welcome.

He and his wife recently placed a roughly 30 lb. decorative stone in part of their garden (see above). In short order, his three Shelties checked it out, peeing on or near it. His elderly dachshund, Willie, however, stalked it with hair prickling up his neck and down his back, then barked at and charged it, from two different directions. He circled a few times, then stalked away, apparently confused.

Knowing that Willie has cataracts, Bob went and had his removed, figuring there was a lesson here, but uncertain what it was, something about a gloomy outlook on life being not good.

Want to know a good way to lose weight? Visit, and have your grandkids visit. It is a sure fire way to drop 5 pounds a week! After a 24 day visit with our granddaughters in Texas and a wedding in Roanoke upon our return, we had a great 6-day visit from our youngest grandson Brady.

We went flying, fishing, golfing, amusement park riding, went to an O's game and visited the Naval Academy and the Marine Museum at the Baltimore Detachment of the Marine Corps League all in six days. His older brother Colin will be coming in August. Their visits certainly keep us "young" and, it is a great weight reduction program!

We always will hear about the bad people and all the negative junk.. But check out a these acts of kindness.. It won't cost you anything to do an act of kindness...

The man who gave the shoes off his feet to this homeless girl

This motorist who stopped to help an old woman pass safely

This barber who offers haircuts for the price of a single hug

This police officer who handcuffed himself to a woman to make sure she didn't fall

The many people who helped make this boy's dream come true

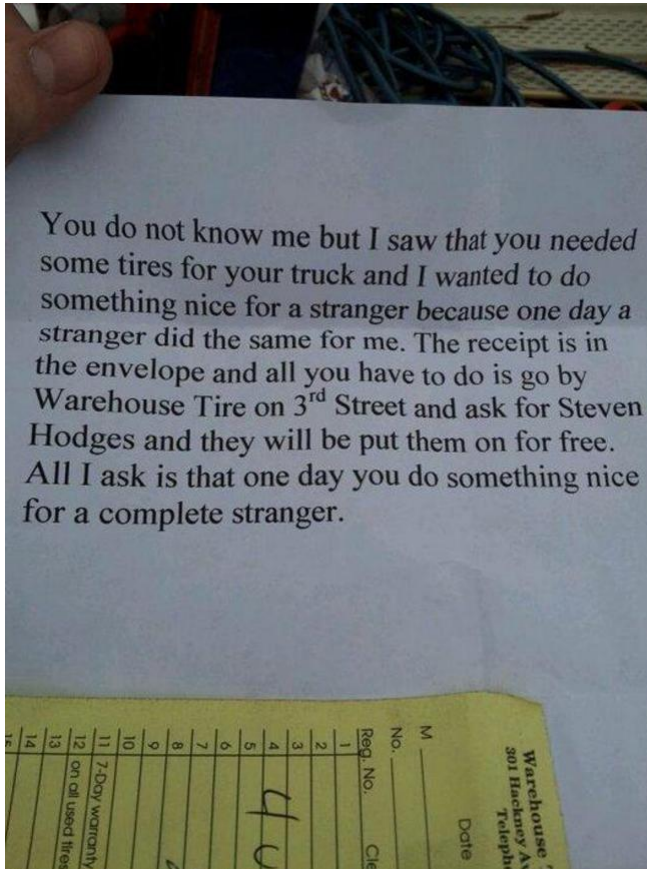

My disabled son has been obsessed with exotic cars for years. When I asked Callum a while ago what would be his favourite thing for Christmas he said, "Well, Dad, I'd love a drive in a supercar but I know that can't happen." A few days later, I posted this request on an Australian exotic car website, thinking that maybe, just maybe, one person might respond. The website went mad and now we've got three events planned for my son, Callum. People rock!

This store employee who gives extra service

The person who decided to put new tires on a stranger's car just because he needed it.

The crowd who decided a fan should be able to watch the show no matter what

This dry cleaning place that helps the unemployed for free

These kids helping an injured member of their rival team to score

The man who played for fun and gave his winnings away

This man who missed his train helping this older lady with her bags.

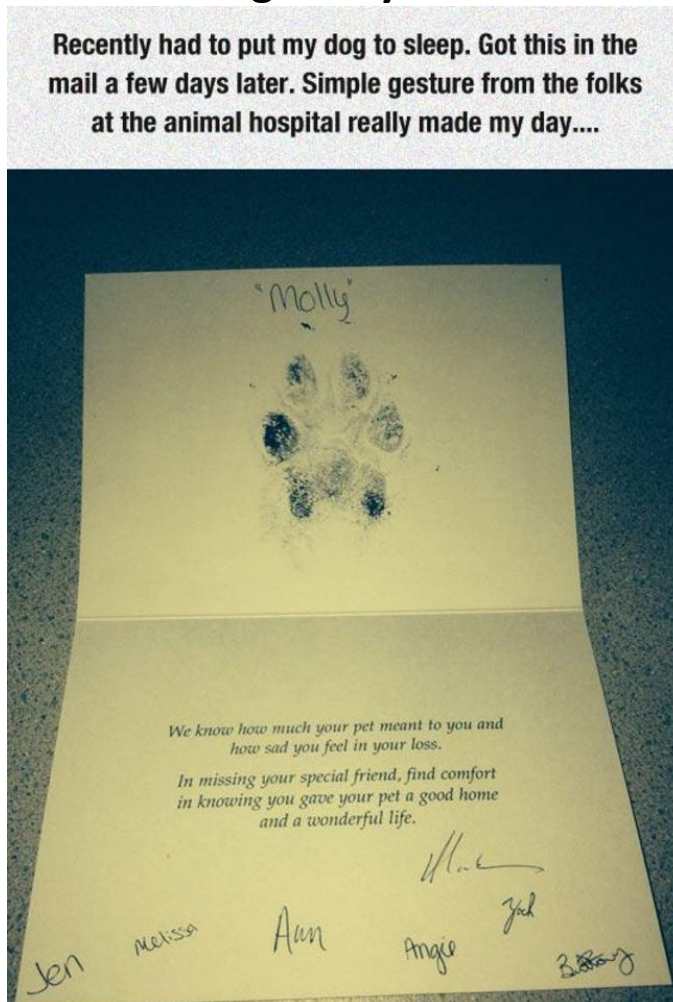

This man who gave something to a homeless man Something to help occupy his mind

And Dan, a man who twice a week, buys coffee for every patient, nurse and doctor at local cancer centers.

The people at the animal hospital, knowing how hard it is to say goodbye.

This man who gave his umbrella away so this cat could have a dry night

“A stranger noticed this kitty sleeping in the rain, so he gave up his umbrella to keep her dry.”

The paramedics who took an elderly man to the hospital and then came back and finished shoveling his driveway for him

An elderly man in my neighborhood had a heart attack while shoveling his driveway. Paramedics took him to the hospital, then returned to finish shoveling his driveway for him.

Great to know there are always wonderful people out there
